

Please note the following important change to the way that judicial checks are now being conducted for students who wish to enroll in our programs.

In keeping with national risk management practices among universities that offer study abroad programs, we are required each year to check student conduct records for all students who wish to enroll in Franklin studies abroad programs. In previous years these checks were performed by other offices on campus. The change in procedure is that all UGA studies abroad programs must now run their own checks of student conduct records. This change in procedure is designed to allow programs to find out about any conduct issues as early as possible in the recruiting and orientation process, prior to making formal admission of the student. The process only takes a few moments for each student and will also provide a fuller, more contextually rich record of any violation(s) and sanction(s) than was previously available to program directors.

For training, and access to the student conduct database, the program director or someone assisting him or her should contact:
